Gen. Paine expressed his desire to bring about an international race, and give the English a chance to win back the America English a charace to win back the America Cup. A syndicate of prominent men was formed to accept the challenge issued by the English yacht Genesta, and the services of Mr. Burgess were secured for designing the American yacht.

The result was the construction of the yacht Puritan, which carried off the honors in the great race in 1885.

There followed another challenge from Engliand in the following year, and Mr. Burgess produced the Mayflower, which defeated the Galates.

The Scotch despatched the Thistle to these shores in 1887, to enter for the cup. Mr. Burgess tried his hand at a new design and the Volunteer was the result. She beat the Thistle in two races. These victories made Mr. Burgess famous as a yacht builder all over the world.

Mr. Burgess was married to Miss Caroline L. Sullivant, the descendant of an old Virginia family, and had a family, one of his sons being called after his old friend—Charles Palne Burgess.

home under the personal care of a member of THE WORLD'S SLAIT. The route to be followed is by way of the Pennsylvania Raliroad system, the Chicago and Northwestern, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific ratiroads to San Francisco, from whence they will be transported to amoa by one of the Oceanic Steamship Company's vessels.

All the railroads have provided free transportation, and Claus Spreckels, owner of the steamship line, has ordered that they be car-ried free across the Pacific.

Subsistence in the journey across the con-tinent is provided by the Government.

EDWARD BURGESS.

Mr. Burgess's death has caused much gloom in local yachting circles, where he was very popular, and many expressions of sympathy have been sent to his late residence since yesterday. He was a victim of typhoid fever.

Mr. Burgess was born in Saudwich, Barnstable County, Mass., June 30, 1848, of a good Boston family. He was graduated from Hervard University in 1871. His father later lost all his property and Edward took the position of instructor of entomology in Harvard University in 1873.

Mr. Burgess was a thorough yachtsman and gave much careful thought to may alarchitecture. He had a warm personal friend in Gen, Charles J. Palue, another ardent devices of the late P. T. Barnam.
